你听说过《蒙娜丽莎》吗？知道它是谁的名作吗？让我们一起来了解一下吧！

She is widely seen as proof that good looks can last forever. But at over 500 years of age, time is catching up with Mona Lisa.

The health of the famous picture, painted by Leonardo da Vinci (莱昂纳多·达·芬奇) during 1503—1506, is getting worse by the year, according to the Louvre Museum (卢浮宫博物馆) where it is housed. “The thin, wooden panel (嵌板) on which Mona Lisa is painted in oils has lost its shape since experts checked it two years ago,” the museum said. Visitors have noticed the change but repairing the world’s most famous painting is not him until his death, and it was eventually sold to France’s King Francis I in 1519.

In 1911, the painting was stolen from the Louvre Museum by a former employee, who took it out of the museum hiding it under his coat. He said he had planned to return it to Italy. The painting was sent back to France two years later.

During World War II, the French hid the painting in small towns to keep it out of the hands of German forces.

Like many old ladies, Mona Lisa has some interesting stories to tell.

Shane Grammer's artwork can be found in cities in Mexico, South Korea, Dubai and beyond. In the past years, it's the murals (壁画) he painted on damaged walls throughout the town of Paradise, California that have gained attention and touched viewers.

In 2018, the Camp Fire, the deadliest wildfire in California's history, swept through Paradise, flattening entire communities, killing scores of people, and displacing tens of thousands. Grammer, whose hometown was just 15 miles from Paradise, was living with his family and working in the Los Angeles area when he saw accounts of the destruction on his friends' social media pages. A single mother he knew shared a photo of ash and rubble where her home once stood. A childhood friend's post showed her burned-down house. After he saw a photo of a friend Shane Edwards' home, which had been reduced to a brick wall with only a chimney standing, he was driven to paint it.

With Edwards' permission, Grammer then used spray paint to transform Edwards' burnt chimney into a strikingly black-and-white portrait of a woman, a piece he called Beauty Among the Ashes. Once the image was posted on Instagram, the victims of the fire, especially, could not contain themselves. "You bring beauty and hope," one posted. Over three months, the 47-year-old created a series of more than a dozen spray-painted murals on the remains of buildings and vehicles rendered useless by the flames. The images included a victim of the fire, a young girl who survived but lost her house, and a series of religious characters.

As a street artist, Grammer has committed his life to creating more art installations (艺术 装置) all over the world that connect people through tragic life events. He has started a foundation called the Art Through Hope Foundation where he intends to bring peace through his art to those affected by tragedy. "I want to do something powerful and make art that emotionally influences people," said Grammer in an interview with KRCR. "I think any artist would consider that as their ultimate goal. And to me, that is the biggest miracle I feel like."

How arts promote our economy

When most people think of the arts, they imagine the end product, the beautiful painting, a wonderful piece of music, or an award-winning performance in the theatre. 1. _____ Unfortunately, the economic impact of the arts is often overlooked and badly judged.

The arts create jobs that help develop the economy. Any given performance takes a tour bus full of artists, technical experts, musicians, or writers to create an appealing piece of art. These people can earn a living wage for their professional knowledge and skills. 2. _____ Digital media experts, photographers and advertising agents are hired to sell tickets and promote the event. According to the Dallas Area Cultural Advocacy Coalition, arts agencies employ more than 10,000 people as full- or part-time employees or independent contractors.

3. _____ In 2005, when the Bishop Arts Theatre was donated to our town, the location was considered a poor area of town. After investing more than $1 million in reconstructing the building, we began producing a full season of theatre performances, jazz concerts, and year-round arts education programmes in 2008. Besides tickets, some jazz lovers nearby will pay their transport fares to and from the events.

Arts contribute to cultural development. 4. _____ When they gather together, they will share their experiences and renew their energy. As a result, cultures find the way to exchange, and economy can be advanced. It is wrong to assume arts groups cannot make a profit. If you are a student studying the arts, odds are that you have been ill-advised to have a Plan B. 5. _____ A. Another group is needed to help market the event. B. Above analysis in mind, you needn't worry about your career and have an alternative plan.

- C. The arts boost the development of economy throughout a community despite the side effects. D. In fact, arts groups bring broader value to our communities, especially in economy. E. A successful arts neighbourhood creates a series of effects throughout a community. F. Artists and audience are all from diverse backgrounds. G. Culture binds together not only hearts and souls, but the entire society.

[2024·浙江台州十校联盟高二期中联考]

Just by typing a few keywords and waiting a few seconds, a picture comparable to that painted by a human artist appears on screen.

AI art generators have seemingly swept the Chinese Internet. In some paintings created by AI, an elderly man can be shown as a young animated image, and pets can be turned into adorable cartoon girls or boys.

Huang Ge, an illustrator from Shanghai, said that it usually takes him several hours or days to complete one illustration. But with AI art generators, the efficiency is greatly improved. “Also, the generators have many modification (修改) modes, and the picture can be modified directly in the painting software,” he added. Ding Jiao, a comic artist, considers the popularity of AI art generators reasonable as many people who are not good at drawing can create great works through them.

So is AI painting gradually replacing human painting? In the hot topic “Using a picture to prove that human artists will never be replaced by AI” online, many netizens uploaded their paintings to prove that humans are better than AI. “Though AI technology has developed rapidly, AI cannot fully replace humans. The warmth and inspiration in human creations are irreplaceable,” said Ding Daoshi, an independent analyst.

Another controversial issue is that there is no consensus (共识) of who owns the copyright of AI art. Some users have openly sold their AI paintings and earned money, but it is still a grey area about whether these artworks belong to users, the digital tool developers or even AI.

Ding Daoshi noted that the various sides should get together to debate the issue and come up with some accepted rules as soon as possible because AI is already penetrating deeply into the lives of human beings.

- ( ) 1. Why does the author mention “an elderly man” and “pets” in Paragraph 2?
- To show the popularity of AI art generators.
  - To illustrate the disadvantage of AI art generators.
  - To prove the significance of AI art generators.
  - To present the powerful function of AI art generators.
- ( ) 2. What does Paragraph 3 mainly talk about?
- The efficiency of AI art generators.
  - The benefits of AI art generators.
  - The popularity of AI art generators.
  - The functions of AI art generators.
- ( ) 3. What is a controversial issue about AI painting besides its copyright?
- Whether human artworks will be replaced by AI artworks.
  - Whom AI artworks will really belong to.
  - Whether human artists are better than AI art generators.
  - How AI painting can play a supportive role.
- ( ) 4. What does the underlined part “a grey area” in Paragraph 5 refer to?
- A done deal.
  - A give-and-take attitude.
  - An ill-defined situation.
  - A hard-to-get game.

Christ Mocked, by the Florentine master Cimabue, was sold at auction (拍卖) for €24 million in 2019. But the Chilean buyers never got to include the work in their collection because the French government refused to give it an export licence.

Ministers declared the painting a national treasure, officially giving the Louvre 30 months to raise the funds for its purchase. The Louvre recently reached an agreement with the owners.

Laurence des Cars, the president of the Louvre, said it was a “great joy” to have acquired the painting, which “constitutes a crucial landmark in the history of art”. The museum did not say how much it had paid, nor who had sold the painting, which will be exhibited in 2025.

The painting was spotted four years ago by Philomene Wolf, an auctioneer, when she was asked to assess the contents of a house that was being cleared. The owner, in her nineties, thought it was a painting from Russia of no value and was preparing to put it in the dustbin.

Wolf was struck by its quality and guessed that it could be Italian. Experts using modern technology confirmed that it was by Cimabue, who is widely regarded as having opened the gateway to Renaissance art. It is believed to date from 1280. Christ Mocked is one of about 15 known Cimabue's works.

The Louvre launched an appeal on Tuesday for donations to buy another painting, The Basket of Wild Strawberries by Jean Simeon Chardin, the 18th-century French still life (静物画) master. The work, which was first exhibited in 1761, was in a private collection from the 19th century until last year, when it was sold for €24.3 million to an American art museum at auction in Paris.

Luckily, many groups and individuals donated two-thirds of the sum. The museum must pay the remaining €8 million and is hoping that members of the public will help to ease the burden by responding to its appeal, which aims to raise €1.3 million.

Museums have been around for centuries, with the first known museum founded in the 3rd century BC. For a long time, they were used to showcase traditional artworks like paintings, sculptures and drawings.

In recent times, however, digital art has started to gain popularity as an art form. This has raised the question of whether or not museums should accept digital art into their collections.

Digital art can be defined as an artwork created using digital technology and tools like computers, tablets and smartphones. It includes a variety of mediums such as animation, 3D modelling, virtual reality and video game design. Digital art is increasingly being used by artists to create unique pieces that are unlike anything else seen before.

The debate over whether museums should accept digital art into their collections has been ongoing for some time. On one hand, many believe that digital art is not “real” art and does not deserve to be given the same recognition as traditional artworks. On the other hand, supporters of digital art hold the view that museums should endorse this new form of expression and give it the same respect as any other type of artworks.

The truth is that many museums have already begun to accept digital art into their collections. In fact, some museums have even devoted entire exhibitions to showcasing digital artworks from around the world. This shows that there is a growing appreciation for this type of expression and that it is slowly becoming more accepted by mainstream audiences.

In general, while there may still be some debate over whether or not digital art deserves to be accepted into museum collections, it is clear that many museums are beginning to welcome this new form of expression. As more people realize the digital art and its potential as an artistic medium, it will likely become even more popular in years to come.

- A. It is warmly welcomed by all museums.

Period Five Writing

① 阅读理解

[2024 · 广东河源高二联考]

Artists everywhere are getting “understandably nervous” about recent advances in artificial intelligence. Last month, a winner of an art prize at the Colorado State Fair “sparked a violent protest” when he posted the news and explained that he’d created his image using an AI program. Critics quickly accused 39-year-old Lance Allen of cheating. To be fair, Allen had won in the digital art category and made no secret of how the image had been produced. But the rules of art making are clearly changing.

“Allen’s creative process, to be clear, was not a push-button operation,” said Jason Blain in Forbes. He claims to have spent 80 hours on his entry, first fine-tuning his text prompts (提示), then touching up the final image using Photoshop and similar tools, then arranging to print the image on canvas. He made the finished product using AI much as a photographer creates an image using a camera.

But Allen, a tabletop game developer, is awed by AI’s capabilities and urges artists and illustrators to welcome the technology rather than fight it. “Art is dead,” he says. “AI won. Humans lost.” A more inspiring lesson to take from his victory, though, is that image generators are likely to “expand the appreciation and creation of art” by opening the field to people, like him, who could never draw anything as detailed as his award-winning image. “If anything, we will have more artists, and as the technology progresses, we might see the emergence of art styles that none have seen before.”

You can’t blame traditional artists if they’re unhappy. Image generators work their magic, after all, by analysing the aesthetics (美学) of millions of pre-existing images. One of the most complicated image generators “makes crystal clear just how destructive this technology will be,” said Loz Eliot in New Atlas. Given a specific prompt, it can produce an image of just about anything you can imagine and even follow the style of a favourite artist’s work. Its arrival marks “an incredible popularization of visual creativity” while aiming “a knife to the heart of anyone who’s spent decades improving their artistic techniques hoping to make a living from them.”

- ( ) 1. Why are artists getting nervous about AI recently?
- A. A winner of an art prize used AI.
B. Lance Allen cheated in the art competition.
C. The digital art will soon dominate.
D. There will be great changes in art creation.
- ( ) 2. What does the author intend to tell us in Paragraph 2?
- A. It was no easy work for Allen even with AI.
B. Allen worked as a photographer creating an image.
C. AI played a key role in Allen’s art creation.
D. Although with AI, Allen’s creation counted a lot.
- ( ) 3. What lesson can we draw from Allen’s winning?
- A. Humans have been beaten by AI.
B. AI will make art more popular.
C. Greater artists and new art styles will appear.
D. AI enables amateurs to win art competitions.

- ( ) 4. Why does Loz Eliot say the new technology will be destructive?
- A. It works by analysing images created by humans.
- B. It can produce images beyond people's imagination.
- C. It makes artists' long-time effort meaningless.
- D. It makes it impossible for artists to make a living.

II 阅读七选五

Want to “feel something” when you look at art?

Many of you would love to have deep connection with art when you look at a painting or sculpture. But how do you do that exactly?

1. _____

Keep an open mind.

Some artworks may be surprising, and others might be a let-down. And that's OK. So allow yourself to feel however the art makes you feel. 2. _____ Studies have shown that it can lower stress—particularly when people view images of landscapes and seascapes. And it makes you feel good.

3. _____

First, be realistic about how long you can spend at the museum. You don't need more than an hour or two. After that, it becomes “information overload” and it's hard to stay focused. Next, be strategic about what you want to look at. Either way, there's no right way to go through an art museum. So mind your time and make sure you concentrate on what really interests you.

Observe the art in person.

Get up close and personal. We have the luxury of seeing the real thing at a museum. So take your time to observe qualities about a work that may not come through on a computer screen. 4. _____ Besides, consider the subject of the art, which can have a profound effect on how you feel about the work.

Appreciate and reflect.

5. _____ It can also help you make sense of the world around you. When you look at art and open yourselves to understanding it, you gain a deeper understanding not just of artists, but also different kinds of ways of making arts.

- A. Arrange your time properly.
- B. Reflection is a key to art appreciation.
- C. Keep your museum visit short and focused.
- D. The following tips may help you better enjoy art.
- E. Viewing art can have a profound impact on your psychology.

阅读下面材料,根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段,使之构成一篇完整的短文。

Amy loved drawing, but her grandmother Bonnie was opposed to it, who thought those strange things Amy drew were not going to help her in the future. One day, when they were eating dinner at the table, the doorbell rang.

Amy answered the door to see a well-dressed man standing at the door. “Oh my God, I know you! Mr Henderson?” Amy said gladly. “You are my favourite cartoonist (漫画家)! Wow! Hello, sir!” Then she led Mr Henderson into her house.

Mr Henderson was a famous New York-based cartoonist. He worked for an art magazine.

“I received a letter with some samples (样本) of your artwork, Amy. And I must say I was so impressed by your talent. In fact, I wrote you letters, but I never got a reply,” Mr Henderson said to Amy. “If I hadn’t visited you today, you might have missed out on a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.”

“You sent me letters?” Amy wondered aloud. Amy noticed Bonnie sat uneasily in her seat, and she realized why the letters had never reached her. Her grandmother kept them hidden from her. Mr Henderson continued, “We are accepting applications for our arts training programme this summer. I would personally teach the students the art of cartoons and everything related. For that, you need to pass a drawing test. If everything goes well, you will be able to learn from me later and pursue your dream for art.”

Amy was excited about the news, but Bonnie refused and said angrily, “You are wasting our time, sir. Please leave.”

“But ma’am, this can really shape your granddaughter’s career,” Mr Henderson said. “And if you’re concerned about the money, please don’t be. The committee will cover all the costs. A gifted childlike Amy can greatly benefit from the programme.” Then Mr Henderson pulled out a file from his document case and gave it to Amy. “It’s a test assignment. I know your grandmother is against it and things are tough, but I hope you’ll be able to do it,” he added as he left the house.

Paragraph 1:
Amy couldn’t contain her excitement after Mr Henderson’s visit. _____

Her face is framed by wavy brown hair extensions, her filled lips pursed towards the viewer. It could be a description of an Instagram post, but the touched-up (修改过的) beauty is Diana Cecil, an English noblewoman who belongs to a powerful family at the Jacobean court. Experts at English Heritage have discovered that her portrait had been altered by restorers to enhance certain features, suggesting that our modern beauty standards might not be so modern after all.

The great-grand-daughter of William Cecil, Lord Burghley, one of Elizabeth I's closest advisers, Diana was considered one of the great beauties of her age. Yet it seems a later artist had other ideas. A restorer, probably in the 19th century, worked on the painting after it was damaged from being rolled sideways. It seems they also took the opportunity to alter the noblewoman's face, enlarging her lips and lowering her hairline to reduce the size of her forehead.

Now, following careful conservation work, Cecil's original appearance has been restored, with the full-length portrait-painted by Cornelius Johnson when Cecil was about 31. The conservation team discovered the changes made to the Johnson painting after removing a yellowing layer of oily liquid that had covered its original, more vivid colours. They also surprisingly found the artist's signature, and a date that had been signed in the portrait's curtain suggesting it was finished in 1634 and not 1638 as previously thought.

According to Alice Tate-Harte, a conservator at English Heritage, it was not uncommon for people to "sweeten" old paintings in the 19th and early 20th centuries. "Conservation wasn't a profession, and they weren't working in institutions with salaries," she said. "They were artist restorers and they had a bit more flexibility to prettify and beautify, whereas we have a lot more ethics today. We must keep our retouching to a minimum. I hope I've done Diana justice by removing those additions and presenting her natural face to the world."

- ( )1. What does the discovery of experts at English Heritage suggest?
- A. Prettiness is in the eyes of the viewer.
B. Every great artist was once an amateur.
C. Past norms may repeat themselves at present.
D. Beauty souls shine brighter than appearances.

- ( )2. What do we know about the original portrait of Diana Cecil?
- A. The original beauty failed to entertain the restorer.
B. The portrait was in fact painted for William Cecil.
C. The painter intended to hide the beauty of Diana.
D. The age of Diana was exposed by her hairline.
- ( )3. Which of the following is an unexpected finding from the conservation work?
- A. The addition of the bright colour.
B. The portrait's date of completion.
C. The removal of the artist's signature.
